“Well-researched and original” essays on the intersection between food and adventure (Publishers Weekly). Culinary Tourism is the first book to consider food as both a destination and a means for tourism. The book’s contributors examine the many intersections of food, culture, and tourism in public and commercial contexts, in private and domestic settings, and around the world. The contributors argue that the sensory experience of eating provides people with a unique means of communication—whether they’re trying out a new kind of ethnic restaurant in their own town or the native cuisine of a place far from home. Editor Lucy Long explains how and why interest in foreign food is expanding tastes and leading to commercial profit in America, but the book also shows how tourism combines personal experiences with cultural and social attitudes toward food and the circumstances that allow for adventurous eating. “Contributors to the book are widely recognized food experts who encourage readers to venture outside the comforts of home and embark on new eating experiences.”

—Lexington Herald-Leader

THE BOOK OF NO

Culinary Tourism

PHILIP O'CEALLAIGH'S first collection of stories, Notes from a Turkish Whorehouse, established him as one of the most vital and distinctive voices to have come on the scene in some time. The Pleasant Light of Day confirms his enormous talent and presses into new thematic (and geographical) territory.

Here are more of what Anne Enright called his 'harsh and careful fables about men's failure to love women'; here too the 'control of tone, dialogue and narrative contour' that Michel Faber described as 'masterful'. These new stories - set in eastern Europe, north Africa and Ireland - are at once visionary, hilarious and piercingly observant. Whether he is imagining a father and son walking the streets of Cairo or concocting a hilarious parody of a certain wildly popular inspirational writer from Brazil, Philip O'Ceallaigh is a writer who demands to be read.
