Henry Moore's humanist sculpture changed the course of art in the twentieth-century and raised the status of British sculpture internationally. Friendships and Legacies explores Moore's relationships with collectors Robert and Lisa Sainsbury and photographer John Hedgecoe and how they had impact on the public presentation of Moore and his work, who became one of the most prominent sculptors of the twentieth century. Moore became friends with Robert and Lisa Sainsbury after their first purchase of his work in 1933. They formed a close friendship and went on to acquire 22 important works by the artist. The Sainsburys gifted their personal collection to the University of East Anglia where Moore's works now form a key part of the displays both inside and outside the Sainsbury Centre. Henry Moore and John Hedgecoe had a close friendship spanning almost forty years. Hedgecoe took many photographs of Moore, producing four books about the artist and his work. Many of these photographs have become iconic, contributing to the public perception of Moore. Friendships and Legacies also includes 24 extended catalogue texts about each of the works by Moore in the Sainsbury Centre collection. The book is richly illustrated with archive images and new photography.

Playwright Noel Coward, designer Mary Quant, artist David Hockney, actor Alan Bates, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, author Daphne du Maurier: the parade of people who have stepped in front of John Hedgecoe's camera come from all walks of life. And no matter who he has photographed in his stellar forty-year career, Hedgecoe has always succeeded in snapping a stylish shot that lets the subject's personality shine through. Here are the best of the best, in an unrivaled collection of classic portraits, accompanied by short, entertaining anecdotes. Some, like mystery writer Agatha Christie and composer Igor Stravinsky, are among the most famous individuals of our age; others-like Louise, a child contortionist who could bend her body in amazing positions and keep a big smile on her face--are unknown, but every bit as compelling. Together, they capture Hedgecoe's brilliant career, from his early days on Queen magazine to his years as Professor of Photography at the Royal College of Art in London.

Throughout his career, photographer John Hedgecoe maintained a close and creative friendship with the celebrated sculptor Henry Moore. This handsome volume, divided into three sections, features all the sculptural forms created by Moore in his lifetime. Hedgecoe begins with a personal reminiscence, a masterful photographic essay, and an evocation of the roots of Moore's genius. In the second section, Hedgecoe presents a photographic exposition of many of Moore's most important works; and the final section reproduces, in chronological order, more than 750 thumbnail images of the sculptural forms Moore created throughout his life. A magnificent resource for students, teachers, and the many admirers of Moore's work. John Hedgecoe is Professor Emeritus at the Royal College of Art in London.
