DECKLEN BANE is an up-start private investigator who washes down painkillers with whiskey sours and offices out of a gourmet grilled-cheese food truck in Downtown Dallas. Haunted by a cold-case murder that he may have been responsible for-one that has torn his life apart over the last nine years-he has vowed to hunt down the mysterious figure who was identified as a possible suspect.

But just as his life's plan hasn't gone the way he expected, his pursuit of him is derailed when Jared Timmons, a wealthy architect, hires Decklen to find the man who his wife has been cheating with. His investigation leads him into a seedy, adulterous world of THE RED SCARF SOCIETY, a members-only website for the rich and beautiful. But this isn't just a "catch 'em in the act" surveillance case. As Decklen digs deeper and the body count rises, he learns that everyone, including his client, is lying to him. Lies that reveal anyone can kill anyone at any time-even Decklen.

From one of the masters of noir comes perhaps his most compelling novel. Roy Nichols is trying to make a go of running a motel with his wife, but forces are conspiring against them. The highway that was supposed to run past their motel may never get built, and their business is drying up. When Roy stumbles upon a briefcase loaded with cash, his problems seem to have miraculously disappeared. But in Gil Brewer's world, good fortune is never free and greed inevitably leads to destruction.

In a city full of thieves and Communists, danger and death, spirited young Lydia Ivanova has lived a hard life. As exiles, Lydia and Valentina have learned to survive in a foreign land. Often, Lydia steals away to meet with the handsome young freedom fighter Chang An Lo. But they face danger: Chiang Kai Shek's troops are headed toward Junchow to kill Reds like Chang, who has in his possession the jewels of a tsarina, meant as a gift for the despot's wife. The Story of A Red Scarf Holt Rinehart & Winston

When Tai Shan and his father, Baba, fly kites from their roof and look down at the crowded city streets below, they feel free, like the kites. Baba loves telling Tai Shan stories while the kites--one red, and one blue--rise, dip, and soar together. Then, a bad time comes. People wearing red armbands shut down the schools, smash store signs, and search houses. Baba is sent away, and Tai Shan goes to live with Granny Wang. Though father and son are far apart, they have a secret way of staying close. Every day they greet each other by flying their kites??one red, and one blue??until Baba can be free again, like the kites. Inspired by the dark time of the Cultural Revolution in China, this is a soaring tale of hope that will resonate with anyone who has ever had to love from a distance.

A CHRISTMAS STORY

French List

In December 2015, six months before his death at the age of 93, Yves Bonnefoy concluded what was to be his last major text in prose, L'écharpe rouge, translated here as The Red Scarf. In this unique book, described by the poet as "an anamnesis"--a formal act of commemoration--Bonnefoy undertakes, at the end of his life, a profoundly moving exegesis of some fragments written in 1964. These fragments lead him back to an unspoken, lifelong anxiety: "My most troubling memory, when I was between ten and twelve years old, concerns my father, and my anxiety about his silence." Bonnefoy offers an anatomy of his father's silence, and of the melancholy that seemed to take hold some years into his marriage to the poet's mother. At the heart of this book is the ballad of Elie and H el ene, the poet's parents. It is the story of their lives together in the Auvergne, and later in Tours, seen through the eyes of their son--the solitary boy's intense but inchoate experience, reviewed through memories of the now elderly man. What makes The Red Scarf indispensable is the intensely personal nature of the material, casting its slant light, a setting sun, on all that has gone before.

13 French Street ; And, The Red Scarf Facing History & Ourselves National Foundation, Incorporated Growing up in a small town, enjoying family and the outdoors can make you different than others now a days. Annabelle felt no need to be on her cell phone all the time or to go to theme parks. She enjoyed working on the farm, learning the traits of flowers, raising her pet lamb Baa Baa and listening to Granny B and Grampa Homer as they shared family stories. As Annabelle listened she heard more than words about people she had only seen in pictures. She heard the honor and the love than her grandparents had for them. Annabelle learned how to make tinctures, oils and vinegar for wild plants. Then there was the process of taking raw wool to yarn and learning to knit simple patterns. She was growing and changing but in spite of everything she was allowed to feel safe in who she was growing up to be.

It is the Author's desire that children will know and realize that God is faithful and cares about them as much today as He did in the past with the men, women and children of the Bible.

This accessible autobiography is the true story of one girl's determination to hold her family together during one of the most terrifying eras of the twentieth century. It's 1966, and twelve-year-old Ji-li Jiang has everything a girl could want: brains, friends, and a bright future in Communist China. But it's also the year that China's leader, Mao Ze-dong, launches the Cultural Revolution—and Ji-li's world begins to fall apart. Over the next few years, people who were once her friends and neighbors turn on her and her family, forcing them to live in constant terror of arrest. When Ji-li's father is finally imprisoned, she faces the most difficult dilemma of her life.
