What does
man seek in religion, and
what should
he seek in it?
How does God
reveal Himself
in order to bring man to a
knowledge of the Truth?
How does
suffering help
this revelation
to occur?
These and other
questions
were discussed by

Fr. Seraphim

Orthodox
Christian
monk from the mountains of northern California,
during a
lecture he gave at the

Drawing from a variety of sources -- the Holy Scriptures,
patristic

writings, the lives of both ancient and modern saints, and accounts of persecuted Christians behind the Iron Curtain -- Fr. Seraphim goes to the core of all Christian life: the conversion of the heart of man, which causes it to bum with love for Christ and transforms one into a new being.

Publishing St. Symeon (942-1022), abbot, spiritual director, theologian and church reformer, was the great spiritual master of Eastern Christianity. His Discourses, the central work of his life, were preached to his monks during their Matins ritual. AD 330-1022 St Herman Press An insider's account of the Eastern Orthodox Church, from its beginning in the era of Jesus and the Apostles to the modern age In this short, accessible account of the Eastern Orthodox Church, John McGuckin begins by tackling the question "What is the Church?" His answer is a clear, historically and theologically rooted portrait of what the Church is for Orthodox Christianity and how it differs from Western Christians' expectations.

McGuckin explores the lived faith of generations, including sketches of some of the most important theological themes and individual personalities of the ancient and modern Church. He interweaves a personal approach throughout, offering to readers the experience of what it is like to enter an Orthodox church and witness its liturgy. In this astute and insightful book, he grapples with the reasons why many Western historians and societies have overlooked Orthodox Christianity and provides an important introduction to the Orthodox Church and the Eastern Christian World.

The Cambridge Companion to Christian Mysticism is a multi-authored interdisciplinary guide to the study of Christian mysticism, with an emphasis on the 3rd through the 17th centuries. Written by leading authorities and younger scholars from a range of disciplines, the volume both provides a clear introduction to the Christian mystical life and articulates a bold new approach to the study of mysticism. Theology and

 key aspects of

In Mystical Theology and Contemporary Spiritual Practice several leading scholars explore key themes within the Christian mystical tradition, contemporary and historical. The overall aim of the book is to demonstrate the relevance of mystical theology to contemporary spiritual practice. Attention is given to the works of Baron von Hugel, Vladimir Lossky, Margery Kempe, Ludwig Wittgenstein, Thomas Merton, and

Francisco de Osuna, as well as to a wide range of spiritual practices, including pilgrimage, spiritual direction, contemplative prayer and the quotidian spirituality of the New Monasticism. Christian mystical theology is shown to be a living tradition, which has vibrant and creative new expressions in contemporary spiritual practice. It is argued that mystical theology affirms something both ordinary and extraordinary which is fundamental to the Christian experience of prayer. Orthodox Dogmatic Theology St Herman Press Andrew Louth traces the Christian mystic tradition from Plato, through figures such as Origen, Gregory of Nyssa and Augustine and explores the diverse and conflicting influences to be found in Christian spirituality. Vladimir Lossky, Mystical Theology of the Eastern Church University of Notre Dame Press Jewish Roots of Eastern Christian Mysticism explores influences of Jewish apocalypticism and mysticism on the development of Eastern Christian theology, demonstrating that recent studies of apocalyptic literature, the Qumran Scrolls, Gnosticism, and later Jewish mysticism throw new and welcome light on the sources and continuities of Orthodox spirituality and liturgy.

Church Fathers did not ignore this aspect of Christ's Atoning work, and the present work seeks to make their views on the subject known. From St. Cyril of Alexandria's commentaries to St. Symeon the New Theologian's and St. Gregory Palamas' homilies to Patriarch Jeremiah's correspondence with the Lutherans to St. Philaret of Moscow's sermons, each era of the Church has	affirmed what is today called Penal Substitutionary Atonement. Although the term was coined in the West, the substance of its content is Patristic. Not satisfied with merely knowing about Christ's historical sacrifice, the Church has sought to internalize the truth of the Cross. Orthodox mystical theology therefore takes up the theme of the Cross as a living reality which works in	the heart to transform man through his participation with the divine nature. The present work seeks to make this connection, that between the historical cross and the living Christ, clearer in order that the Christian way of life might stand more firmly. The Christian path of practice is centered in the life of prayer. Prayer, however, is not a haphazard endeavor. The Church

Fathers have ever endeavored to provide instruction that aided the faithful into deeper communion with the Lord. The ability to attend to Him without distraction, however, is constantly being obstructed by the passions. The passions are those internal motions which darken, confuse, and lead the mind astray. Therefore the passions were a principle focus of the Fathers. The present work therefore seeks to address the manner in which the Atonement speaks to the interior life of the Christian, and then to elucidate the methodology of its practice. The twin pillars of watchfulness and stillness, rooted in the reality of our co-crucifixion, co-resurrection, and co-ascension with Christ, provide the means by which a Christian can learn to walk in his new identity in Christ. Seeing the connection between theology and praxis will help the Christian avoid the trap of reducing the spiritual disciplines to mere pious duties to be performed, and give tools to aid in the deconstructing of the false identities that fallen man weaves for himself. Lastly, the very nature of what it means to be human will be touched upon. It is well known that God transcends conceptualization, but it is less well known that, since man is made in God's image, man in his experience of himself also transcends conceptualization. In other words, there is a mysterious depth to man's being which exceeds his ability to conceive, and yet he can experience these mysterious depths of his own being due to his apophatic anthropology. God, moreover, who comes to dwell in the hearts of the faithful, can thus be experienced apophatically in the mysterious depths of one's own being. In the depths of interior silence, the image bearer, man, communes with the Original Image, God. A Search for Orthodox Spirituality Oxford University Press The Oxford Handbook of Mystical Theology provides a guide to the mystical element of Christianity as a theological phenomenon. It differs not only from psychological and anthropological studies of mysticism, but from other theological studies, such as more practical or pastorally-oriented works that examine the patterns of spiritual progress and offer counsel for deeper understanding and spiritual development. It also differs from more explicitly historical studies tracing the theological and philosophical contexts and ideas of various key figures and schools, as well as from literary studies of the linguistic tropes and expressive forms in mystical texts. None of these perspectives is absent, but the method here is more deliberately theological, working from within the fundamental interests of Christian mystical writers to the articulation of those interests in distinctively theological forms, in order, finally, to permit a critical theological engagement with them for today. Divided into four parts, the first section introduces the approach to mystical theology and offers a historical overview. Part two attends to the concrete context of sources and practices of mystical theology. Part three moves to the fundamental conceptualities of mystical thought. The final section ends with the central contributions of mystical teaching to theology and metaphysics. Students and scholars with a variety of interests will find different pathways through the Handbook.

The notion of the deification of the human person (theosis, theopoiësis, deificatio) was one of the most fundamental themes of Christian theology in its first centuries, especially in the Greek world. It is often assumed that this theme was exclusively developed in Eastern theology after the patristic period, and thus its presence in the theology of the Latin West is generally overlooked. The aim of this collection is to explore some Patristic articulations of the doctrine in both the East and West, but also to highlight its enduring presence in the Western tradition and its relevance for contemporary thought. The collection thus brings together a number of capita selecta that focus on the development of theosis through the ages until the Early Modern Period. It is unique, not only in emphasizing the role of theosis in the West, but also in bringing to the fore a number of little-known authors and texts, and analysing their theology from a variety of fresh perspectives. Thus, mystical theology in the West is shown to have profound connections with similar concerns in the East and with the common patristic sources. By tying these traditions together, this volume brings new insight to one of mysticism's key concerns. As such, it will be of significant interest to scholars of religious studies, mysticism, theology and the history of religion.

Origins of Eastern

Christian Mysticism asserts that the thinkers between Basil of Caesarea and Symeon the New Theologian were important mainly for their role in the formation of Hesychasm, a fourteenth-century mystical movement in the Eastern church. The book surveys previous research on Proto-Hesychasm and sets forth eight Hesychastic trends in its practitioners: monasticism, dark and light mysticism, and an emphasis on the heart, theōsis, the humanity of Christ, penthos, and unceasing prayer. Theodore Sabo integrates detailed and carefully researched accounts of the lives and thought of the foundational figures of Hesychasm into a compelling narrative of the movement's origins. The Cappadocian fathers established monasticism as the predominant milieu of Proto-Hesychasm and emphasized both theōsis and dark mysticism. Dark mysticism would come into conflict with the light mysticism of their contemporary Pseudo-Macarius, but both currents would be passed on to the Hesychasts. Macarius was a seminal figure within Proto-Hesychasm, responsible for its stress on light mysticism and heart mysticism. Hesychasm itself, the author contends, emerged from two main Proto-Hesychast fonts, the philosophical (represented by such figures as Pseudo-Dionysius and Maximus the Confessor) and the ascetic (the realm of figures like John Climacus and Isaac of Nineveh). The former school transmitted to Hesychasm a virtually unacknowledged Platonism; the latter contributed to Hesychasm's preoccupation with theōsis, penthos, and unceasing prayer, albeit from a solely monastic perspective. Finally, Symeon the New Theologian emerged as the redoubtable successor to these schools, unifying their distinct traditions in his philosophical approach. While previous scholarship has documented the connections between Proto-Hesychasm and Hesychasm, Origins of Eastern Christian Mysticism is unique in its treatment of the Proto-Hesychasts as a distinguishable group, and as direct instigators of Hesychasm. This provocative study should be of interest to students and scholars of the late antique history of the Eastern

Orthodox Church, as well as to contemporary theologians steeped in the Eastern mystical tradition.

In this thoroughly revised edition of a classic in spirituality,

Walter Brueggemann guides the reader into a thoughtful and moving encounter with the Psalms. This new edition includes a revised text, new notes, and new bibliography. The movement and meeting of God with us is indeed a speech-event in which new humanness is evoked among us. Being attentive to language means cultivating the candid imagination to bring our own experience to the Psalms and permitting it to be disciplined by the speech of the Psalms. And, conversely, it means letting the Psalms address us and having that language reshape our sensitivities and fill our minds with new pictures and images that may redirect our lives. --from Chapter 3 An Anthology of Orthodox Christian Mystical Theology InterVarsity Press of the “West” has played a particularly significant role in the modern Eastern Orthodox imagination. It has functioned as an absolute marker of difference from what is considered to be the essence of Orthodoxy and, thus, ironically has become a constitutive aspect of the modern Orthodox self. The essays collected in this volume examine the many factors that contributed to the “Eastern” construction of the “West” in order to understand why the “West” is so important to the Eastern Christian’s sense of self.

The category
